Stacy A. Gear

Stacy exemplifies many reasons why we can be confident in the next generation of business and community leadership. Stacy's professional experience and training has uniquely integrated the concrete tangibles of business performance with the essential skills of facilitating individual, team and family development.

Stacy has substantive business experience in service industries, including operations management, employee training and development, executive recruiting, and client relationship management. Her experience with businesses undergoing significant change provides a solid foundation for working with clients on strategic planning as well as transition planning. She facilitates Strategic Thinking and Planning processes, creation of shared vision and operational plans, and accountability to operational action plans.

Stacy has completed postgraduate training in Bowen Family Systems through the Kansas City Center for Family and Organizational Systems. She is a fully certified trainer for the internationally renowned Process Communication Model (PCM®) assessment tool, earned her MBA from Wichita State University and majored in business administration at Avila University in Kansas City where she graduated summa cum laude.

Stacy was raised in southwest Kansas and now lives near Wichita with her husband, Rusty and their son. She serves on the Advisory Council for the Salvation Army Homeless Services division and represents Legasus Group at many community functions including the Wichita Metro Chamber of Commerce, Young Professionals of Wichita, and telecommunication industry events across the country.

THE FINE ART OF BUILDING BUSINESS LEGACIES
